GILBERT JOHNSON RECEIVES OUTSTANDING PUBLIC SERVICE AWARD

WASHINGTON, DC – Sometimes words such as originality and creativity are not associated with public sector human resources. Gilbert (Gib) Johnson, Senior Manager at CPS Human Resource Services, wants to change that perception. On April 11th Johnson will be honored with an Outstanding Public Service Award at the 2007 IPMA-HR Montgomery County Maryland Chapter Spring Conference in Bethesda. IPMA-HR and its regional chapters are dedicated to the support and professional development of public sector human resources professionals.

“Right now as public agencies we are exploring new ways of doing things, trying innovative methods, and reworking processes to better suit today’s workplace,” says Johnson. “I’m flattered and honored to be recognized by the Montgomery Chapter whose members include some of the organizations putting these fresh ideas into practice in government.”

Johnson was nominated for his work while with the State of New Jersey and CPS Human Resource Services. Recently he assisted the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID), the lead agency for several Presidential mandates to combat the threat of biological terrorism. Johnson and his staff provided consulting services during NIAID’s reorganization and with the planning and implementation of new programs.
